RESEARCH, POLICY, AND TEACHING INTERESTS

Research career focused on understanding how gender, inequality, & social change affect crime and punishment. Studies identify sex- and race- specific patterns and trends in violence, substance abuse, and white-collar crime. Rigorous methodological design and sophisticated analytic techniques inform how law and social control impinge differently on women and men and by age or race-ethnicity. Publications oriented toward academic, research, and policy audiences from multiple disciplines. Academic work disseminated via public media. Sociological interests: Gender, crime, & social control; Trends in criminal offending and punishment; Communities, inequalities and crime; Violence, Substance Abuse, White-collar crime; Research Methods.

GRADUATE AND UNDERGRADUATE EDUCATION

Since coming to WSU, I have served on over 30 graduate student committees, chairing 8 master's students and 10 PhD committees. I have co-authored with graduate students 6 peer-reviewed articles, 8 other publications, 11 conference presentations, and one grant. I have taught 10 graduate courses, including the required Research Methods seminar. I recently served as (Co) Director of Graduate Studies (2013-2017), responsible for developing and evaluating current graduate students, teaching a professionalization seminar, and implementing long-term programmatic goals. In prior years, I also recruited and admitted prospective graduate students. I now serve as Director of Undergraduate Studies.
